Trade of Russia and the United States. We make the following extracts from an article in the Boston Post:

different periods. The average annual imports from man power can control. Russia at the beginning of the century amounted to $1. 300,000. From 1821 to 1833, they averaged nearly $2,500,000. From 1833 to 1843 the average was considerably less. From 1843 to 1855 there was an increased falling off, so that the average reached only about $1,000,000 a year. In 1855, owing to the war then in existence with the allied powers, the imports sank down to the unprecedented small sum of $296.113 .-The largest imports during this entire period were in 1822, when they amounted to $3,307,328, and in 1832, when they reached the sum of $3,251,852. During the above period from 1821 to 1855, the imports from Italy and Hayti into the United States were nearly as large each as those from Russia, those from the Hanse towns, considerably larger; and those from China some three times as large; and it is noticeable, that our trade with all these powers except Hayti had increased steadily, and sometimes rapidly, especially with China for the last few years, while that with Russia is less than formerly. The exports from this country to Russia during the

Now I'd kotch five big grey pot-bellied ted to some extent were junk, oakum, feathers, Russia leather, linseed, mats, isinglass, felt, quills, &c. During that period the importations of bar iron averaged about 500,000 poods, (the pood being 40 lbs.) a year; the sheet iron about 100,000 poods; hemp nearly the same; flaxseed 12,000 poods. The cordage imported in 1845 amounted to 30,540; in 1852 to 66,682; the bristles in 1845 to 7809; in 1852 to 7997 poods. The imports of bar iron in 1845 were more than eight times as much as in 1852; those of sheet iron considerably more at the first than at the last date; those of hemp were the greatest in 1852. The imports of flax increased in the period mentioned, as did those of cordage, bristles and mats while those of linseed, sailcloth, raven duck, diaper, and crash fell off. The decline of the importation of duck and other coarse cloth is easily accounted for by the inreased manufacture of such articles in this country. During the war of Russia with the allied powers, our commerce with Russia, as has already been seen, was > trade was very nearly destroyed. Since the war, the trade has greatly revived. In 1857. our exports to Russia amounted to $4,474,842, or about twice the amount of any previous year. It is stated that the increase was much owing to the greater demand of that empire for our raw cotton. Our imports from Russia for 1857 amounted to $1,519,420.

very much disturbed. Indeed, for the time being, the

In 1856, our imports of bar iron from Russia amounted to 23,780 poods, of various kinds of hemps to 217,-495, (the figures refer to poods); of flax in its various forms 28,423; of cordage 49,533; of tanned hides 771; of old rope 91,249; of crash 2,003,586 arsheens, the always left something to be wished for and regretted; arsheen is 28 inches in length); of mats 35,950 pieces, it is not complete. But who would venture to add to a and the other usual imports in less quantities.

These goods were shipped from St. Petersburg, from whence our imports are principally received. The ves sels that brought them were 19 in number. The same year 390 British vessels arrived at British ports from St. Petersburg, and 82 at France. In 1850 the number of vessels that arrived here from Russia were 30, of which 16 entered the port of Boston, and 14 that of N York. In 1852 there were 17 arrivals at Boston, and 9 at New York; in 1853, 14 at Boston and 6 at New York. Some former years witnessed double the arrivals We come now to speak of our exports to Russia. It should be remembered that Russia imports from various countries, sugar, cotton, cotton stuffs, yarns, etc., as we have already mentioned. One-half the exports to Russia from all portions of the world consists of raw sugar, cotton, cotton goods. Next come French wines, coffee, tea, tobacco, silks, fruit, cheese. We have generally sent from this country, cotton, tobacco, rice, sugar, coffee, it is quite probable that many have attempted to supply spices, oak bark and dyewoods. In 1838 this country the deficiency; but we know of only one success in so 482; in 1840, 2,203,017; in 1844, 2,767,700; in 1850, 4,329,705; 1851, 10,098,447; 1852, 10,475,168; 1853, 21,286,568, valued at $2,254,345; 1854, 2,914,954

It will thus be seen that the cotton exports from this country into Russia was hardly as great in 1844 as in 1838, but that in 1853 the cotton exports were about four times as large as 1850. As our raw cotton supplies, to a great extent the different factories in Russia, we send there far less cotton yarn than formerly. her coffee directly from Acerica, the West Indies being Gould, a gentleman of our town, whose life has been included in this term. The recent profound speeches of Messrs. Thayer of Mass., and Blair, of Mo., upon Central American affairs, have excited the poetical sensibilities of our friend and contributor, Mr. Blobbs, to such a degree that he came rushing into the office this morning in a great state of excitement with the following epigramatic effusion. We hasten to lay it before our readers :-
